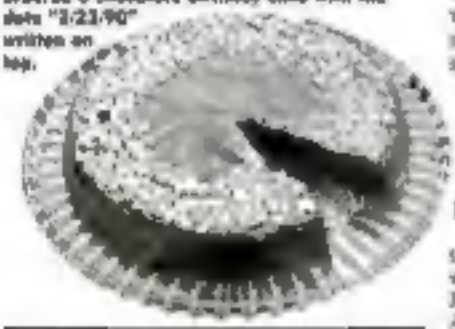
CONVICTED KILLER Miguel A. Richardson, ordered a chocolate birthday cake with the date "2/22/90" written on top.



HERE are some meals to die for!

Death Row killers can order just about anything they want before their date with the executioner — but strangely enough, their tastes usually DON'T include fancy treats like lobster or caviar — and they don't always get what they want.

One murderer in an Asian housegow reportedly ordered the warden's pet cat — stuffed with wild rice and mushrooms and baked in garlic sauce. Needless to say, the smart aleck's request was refused. He ended up with something resembling chop suey before meeting his maker.

Another last meal turned out to be a real killer. The prisoner who had begged for take-out Mexican food, cheated the West African executioner out of a day's pay. He choked to death on a crisp taco shell just three hours before his date with fate.

In Texas, most Death Row residents crave simple, heart-stopping comfort food — cheeseburgers, fried chicken, barbecued ribs and milk shakes.

That's probably the kind of chow Mom used to make in those warm, carefree days of childhood — back before her beloved son or daughter became a twisted monster — too depraved to be allowed to live.

Many of the condemned order so much grub for their last supper, you'd think binge eating was a legal strategy for delaying the execution after the appeals run out.

CON KILLER Vincent Edward Cooks, asked for 12 pieces of chicken, two double-meat cheeseburgers on toasted buns and one large plate of brown French fries.

Cop killer Vincent Edward Cooks, 36, asked for 12 pieces of chicken, two double-meat cheeseburgers on toasted buns, one large plate of brown French fries with ketchup, two large sliced onions, two large sliced tomatoes, six sweet pickles, salad dressing, five sliced jalapeno peppers, peach cobbler with extra crust, and milk before his execution last year.

Jeffrey Dillingham, 27, ordered a cheeseburger with three kinds of cheese (but no mayonnaise, mustard or onions), a large plate of fries, a bowl of macaroni and cheese, lasagna with two slices of garlic bread, four ounces of nacho cheese, three large cinnamon rolls, five scrambled eggs and eight pints of chocolate milk. He then waddled to his 2000 execution.

A romantic request came from Miguel A. Richardson, 46. He ordered a large vegetarian meal topped off with a chocolate birthday cake with seven pink candles and the date "2/22/90" written in frosting on top. The date was his wedding anniversary.

Richard Brimage Jr., 41, must have thought he was out on a Saturday night date just before his 1987 execution. The rapist-killer ordered a pepperoni pizza and a Dr Pepper.

James Briddle, 40, ate like a trucker at a diner, wolfing down a rare T-bone steak, six fried eggs, hash browns and buttered toast. Washing down his big breakfast with orange juice and milk, Briddle then walked his last mile in 1985.

Joe Gonzales Jr., 35, satisfied his sweet tooth before being shot up with a killer cocktail of drugs in 1988. The thief-murderer enjoyed a slice of cheesecake washed down with a strawberry milk shake.

Not every one wants to be weighed down by a heavy meal. Death Row doll Karla Faye Tucker, 30, practically skipped to her 1998 execution, after munching a banana, a peach and a garden salad with ranch dressing.

It's not true that cops get the best seats in the house when it comes to executions. Cop killer Robert Sawyer, 39, was strapped to the gurney in the same room as the cop he killed in 1985.

SNEAKY SON SELLS PARENTS' HOUSE WHILE THEY'RE AWAY!

Allen O'Keefe III had also held a garage sale and gotten rid of all their possessions, including a Mercedes sedan and a pickup truck, a Remington sculpture, antiques, a sit-down lawn mower, furniture and other items, many of which were bought by neighbors, according to Fairfield police.

In all, the heartless offspring sold off more than $1 million of his parents' property and investments in the swanky suburb of Greenfield Hill. And by the time they returned, the con had frittered away all the proceeds and could not even pay them back.

"We had given Allen everything when he was growing up, and he left us with nothing," said his mother Carol.

the prison kitchen stocks or can easily obtain — which may explain why few ask for booze, which is banned as are cigarettes.

Strangely of the 260 men and two women Texas has executed in the last 20 years, 40 passed up a last meal.

Killers who couldn't think of food in their final hours include murderer-rapist-thief Odell Barnes Jr., 51, who skipped dinner before his 2000 execution and asked instead for "justice, equality and world peace."

And then there was mama's boy Dietsch Boyd Teague Jr. The 35-year-old rapist-murderer was so terrified hours before his 1998 final payback call, he refused to eat — until his mom made him have a hamburger.

"This is child exploitation at its very worst," declares Eva van der Hart, director of the International Association for the Prevention of Media Child Abuse.

"To take the uncertainties of children who are the product of anonymous sperm donation and turn that into 'entertainment' is the height of mental cruelty."

On the hit show, which premiered last October in Holland, the contestants are children, ages 4 to 11.

Each segment features children, who get to see the "daddy" candidates, listen to their voices and pepper them with questions.

"The fun comes in as each child tries to figure out who their real father is and you sit in front of the TV following along," enthuses Dutch producer Jan Wolfbergen.

"We obtain the records from sperm banks with the permission of the donors, who agree in order on the show.

"Not even the moms know their names, so there's no chance of cheating. The other two fellows are actors."

The pint-size contestants scrutinize the possible pops for telltale traits like eye and hair color — but often the real dad is the guy who looks least like the child.

"The most entertaining part of the show is listening to the cute questions the kids pose," explains Wolfbergen.

"They'll ask things like 'Are you allergic to carrots?' 'Are you good at arithmetic?' or 'Can you roll your tongue like this?'"

At the end of the show, equivalent of $500,000 in American money.

Losers get consolation prizes such as fishing rods, ice skates or the popular Who's Your Daddy? home game.

But children's rights activists claim that nothing can make up for the emotional trauma inflicted by the TV show, whose set is based on one used by Jeopardy!, 30 years ago.

"Many of these children are horribly disappointed when the man they've picked as their father turns out to be the wrong one — and has no intention of playing a role in their lives," says Amsterdam-based Ms. van der Hart.

"They've been fantasizing about playing catch with him in the backyard but they realize that will never happen. Often they'll burst into tears as the truth sinks in and camera zooms in on them. It's simply heartbreaking to watch."

Wolfbergen says there's nothing wrong with showing genuine human emotion on television — in fact, he insists, that's the whole "charm" of the show.

"On adult reality shows, you often catch the cast struggling for the camera," the TV mogul points out. "These are real kids showing real emotions. The audience picks up on that — and that's exactly what they love about the show."

The American version of the game show is likely to air next September.

"The pilot is being shopped around to the networks. I've seen it and it looks great."

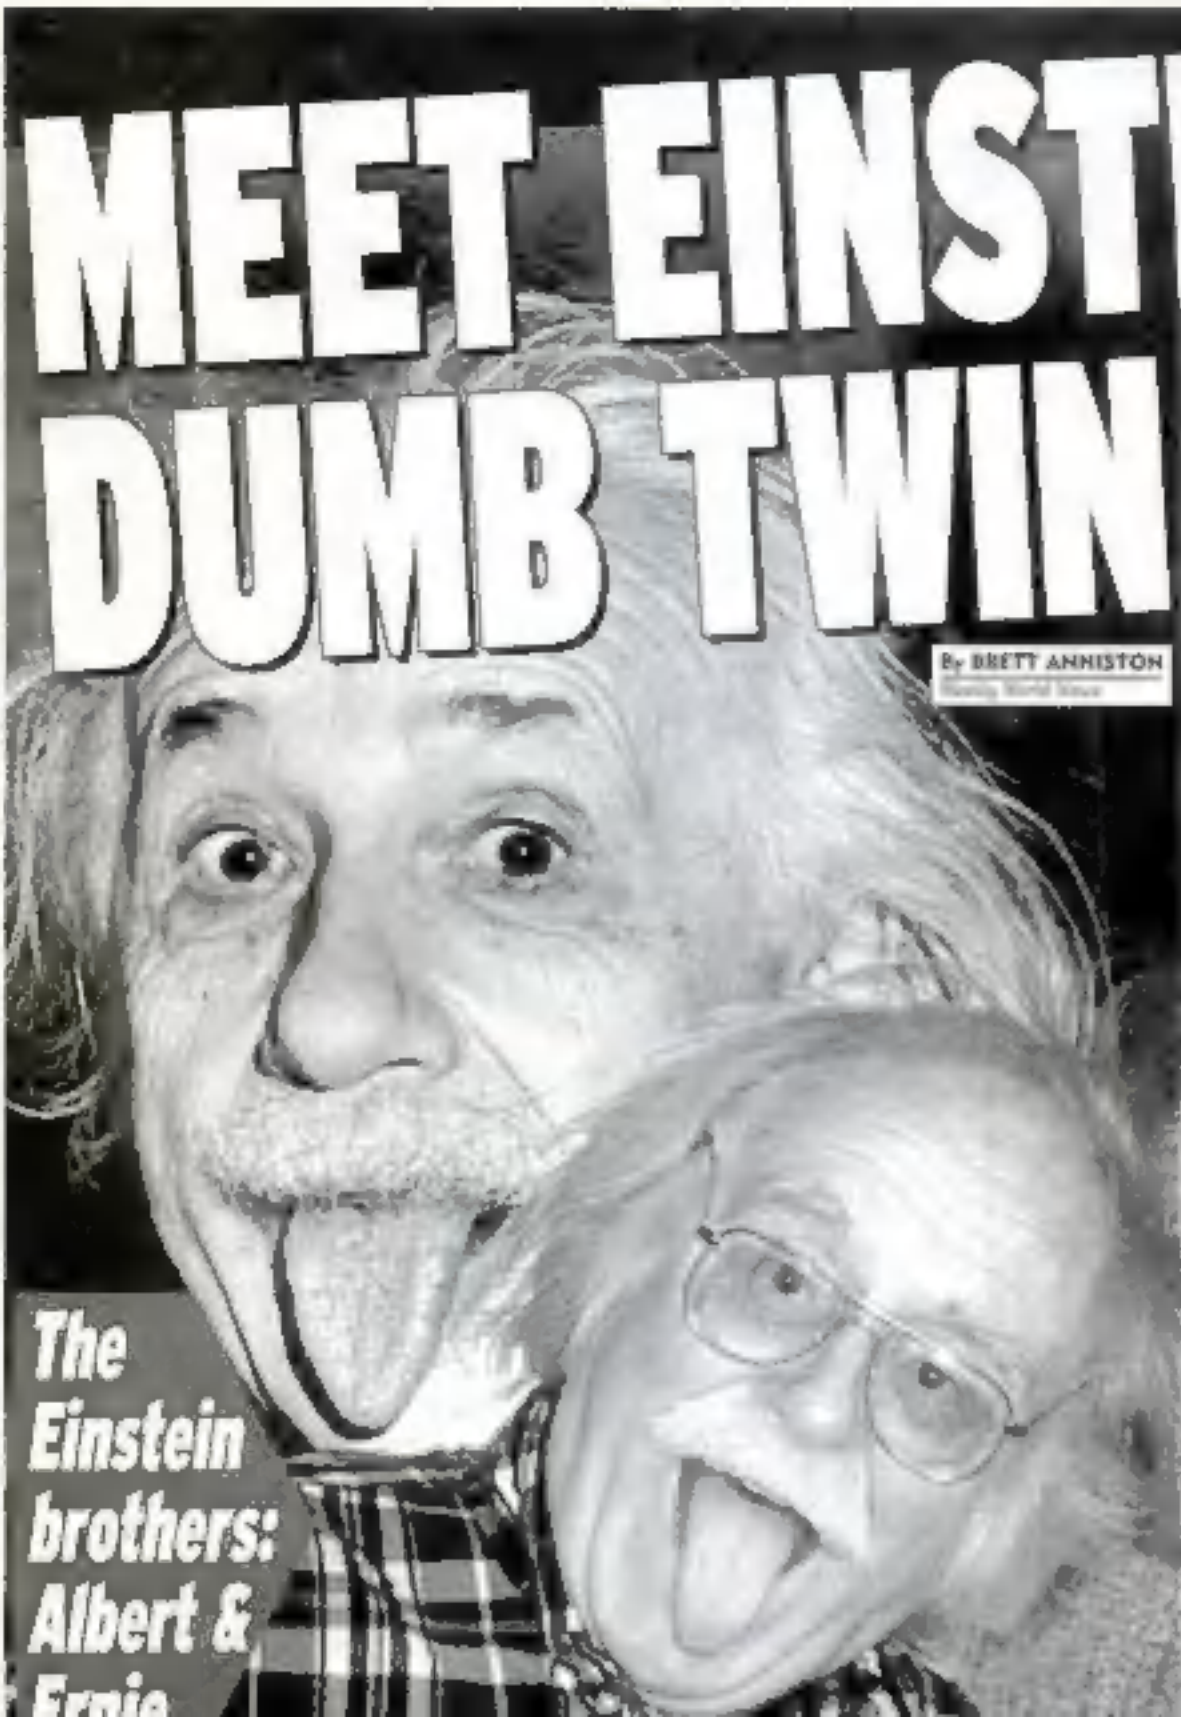
MEET EINSTEIN DUMB TWIN

By BRETT ANNISTON
Weekly World News



The Einstein brothers: Albert & Ernie

FAMED SCIENTIST Albert Einstein took a shocking secret to his grave — he had a twin brother, Ernst "Ernie" Einstein, who was as dumb as a bag of hammers!

Ernst also was a scientist like his late brother and with his wild shaggy hair, was a dead ringer for the famous E=MC² egghead. But that's where the similarity ended.

The goofy "breakthroughs" the little-brained scientist dreamed up included:

- The square hole keeps which curves on the lip and doesn't fall down.
- Swiss cheese without holes.
- The dirt sandwich — "a cheap solution to the problem of hunger in third world countries," he explained.
- Contact lenses with frames — "to keep truck drivers from falling asleep during long hauls."
- The controversial theory that the Earth's core is made of marshmallows, "explaining why our planet is light enough to float in space."

Professor Erich Durkmann, who teaches the history of science at Hauser College in Zurich, Switzerland, drops the bombshell revelation that Einstein had a twin brother in his new book, The Einstein Boys: Bert and Ernie.

"Ernst has always aspired to be as great a scientist and thinker as his brother, but to put it bluntly, he never had much aptitude," says Durkmann.

"Albert used to say, 'I love my brother, but he's a dunderhead.' He was so embarrassed by Ernst's ridiculous theories and useless inventions that in later years he refused to even acknowledge his existence."

Einstein mom Pauline delivered Ernst three minutes after his brilliant twin Albert in Ulm, Germany on March 14, 1879. The boys spent their youth in Munich until 1894, when the family moved to Milan, Italy, after dad Hermann's electrochemical busifinish school, but Ernst, who had to be taught at home because he'd flunked so many classes, moved with his parents.

From then on, Ernst resented the success of his brother and tried to follow in his footsteps. But he failed miserably because he was such a dimwit.

But his loyal wife Hannah defended him even after his death in 2038 at age 70, some three years after Albert's death.

"No one has ever given Ernst the credit he deserves — it's always Albert, Albert, Albert," complained Hannah, shortly before her death in her Bern, Switzerland home in 1971. "What about Ernst's Special Theory of Crowing, which states 'Heavy stuff weighs more than light stuff.'

"He spent hours in his lab in the garage, weighing things on the scale to prove his theory. But his sacrifice gained him nothing.

"The truth is, Ernst was twice the scientist Albert ever was."

Despite early signs that Ernst was a blithering idiot, his father Hermann, mother Pauline and older sister Maja believed he had the makings of a rocket scientist.

"Albert hadn't spoken until the age of 4, yet became the world's greatest theoretical physicist," explains Dorfmann. "Their parents held out hope that Ernst, who couldn't speak until he was 7, would also be a late bloomer. They encouraged his interest in science and gave him an expensive chemistry set.

"Ernst ended up burning down their home twice with the kit and three times he had to be rushed to the hospital after stapling his ear to his head."

By 1905, Albert had published his Special Theory of Relativity and in 1921 he was awarded the prestigious Nobel Prize for Physics.

"Ernst kept trying to catch up, but he simply couldn't," says Dorfmann.

When Nazi madman Adolf Hitler came to power in the 1930s, Albert, a Jew, immediately fled Germany and moved to the United States, where he continued his research at Princeton University.

Meanwhile, dimwitted Ernst fled to Poland, where there was impending horror of Jews and which

DHAWTTED! Ernie believed that the Earth's core is made of arrested Ernst, he insisted that he was a great scientist and demanded to be put to work in a lab.

"The Nazis knew Albert's theories were being used by the U.S. to develop an atomic bomb and they thought that with Ernst's 'brainpower' on their side, they could build one first," says Dorfmann. "Need-less to say, they were dead wrong.

"Every one of Ernst's bombs blew up in the lab. One missile even went astray and demolished Hitler's mountain retreat, killing his favorite German shepherd, Otto."

After the war, Ernst moved to Switzerland, where he lived until his death.

"The sad thing is that Ernst unwittingly turned out to be just as big a war hero as Albert," says Dorfmann. "Ernst's stupid blunders at the Nazi lab set back their war machine at least two years. Without his bumbling,

Bad eggs go wild in Easter rampage

EASTER isn't for sissies in the Czech Republic, especially for women. They get swatted with sticks, doused with cheap perfume and sprayed with cold water — and then they have to give Easter eggs and booze to their attackers!

"I hate Easter," grumps 23-year-old Prague journalist Iveta Pilochova. "I always get thrown into the bathtub."

The holiday hi-jinks begin after Mass on Easter Sunday, when men and boys cut willow branches and fashion them into whips. Then they prowl the town swatting and man-handling girls and women — and their victims are then supposed to reward them with colored eggs or shots of vodka or brandy.

The pagan pummeling started centuries ago, when naughty boys peeked under girls' dresses by lifting their skirts with a willow switch. Someone decided they could get away with the prank if they called it "a fertility ritual."

Followers claim it bestows everlasting youth on the victim — even if her youth is long gone.

Bat Boy quickly became a symbol of hope to the Argentine people - many of whom view him as a living incarnation of Camazotz, the ancient bat god of the Andes.

When Bat Boy received a tip from one of his thousands of devoted followers that a dirty bomb was about to be shipped overseas, he leapt into action.

"With that nose of his, Bat Boy can sniff out an ounce of radioactive material a mile away," says Pedro. "It only took him about two hours to find the right plane."

Eluding the quite frankly poor airport security in Buenos Aires, Bat Boy and his buddy stowed away on the craft as it took off for Washington.

"Bat Boy really did a number on the cargo hold," recalls Pedro. "By the time he was done, every suitcase was busted open and there were bottle rockets, ammunition boxes and toothbrushes all over the place - covered with Bat Boy's teeth marks."

Finally Bat Boy sniffed out the deadly briefcase, which bore a suspicious sticker that read, "Bo bay, mukren," in Arabic.

But when Bat Boy ripped it open, he was faced with a daunting array of wires, flashing lights, plastic explosives and rods packed with radioactive material.

"She was a beautiful young thing, with lustrously flowing hair and dressed in a long white and blue lace gown," Mrs. Fisher told Weekly World News.

Today the tranquil botanical gardens are part of the college, but when Alice was one of the outdoor scenes in the recently released movie The Way We Were, starring Robert Redford and Barbra Streisand.

But in the mid-1700s a far different love story played out on that same soil in the lush Mohawk River Valley — a star-crossed romance cut short by an unspeakably savage outburst of violence.

With her waist-length ebony hair and flashing brown eyes Alice Van der Meer was undisputedly the most desirable belle in the valley. But her father Pieter was a mean-tempered recluse who obstinately refused every lovesick young man who came to call on his daughter. One after another, the stubborn Dutchman ran all every one of them at gun-point.

Inevitably Alice's father became aware of her adventures and one moonlit night he picked up his musket and quietly slipped out of the cabin to follow her. Pieter discovered his headstrong daughter in the arms of her lover — and roaring with anger he shot the young man through the heart.

Then he fled dragging the weeping girl behind him.

it didn't take long to figure out who was responsible for the town's death. Within minutes egged on by members of the dead youth's family a growing mob was screaming for the Dutchman's blood.

Fortunately, tradesmen, even a local preacher, according to scout accounts scooped up tools, clubs and guns, and set out after him. When the bloodthirsty mob caught up with Pieter, they dragged him to a grove of trees — in an area that is now part of the botanical gardens — and burned him at the stake.

The mob's attention was still focused on the agonized screams of Alice's father as his skin peeled and his

It was almost midnight when Alice, her dress torn and her feet shredded and bloodied by sharp rocks and underbrush, stumbled back to the same wooded area where her father was roasted alive, then fell into a brook.

Her parents arrived and pulled her from the stream but their efforts to revive her were not yet satisfied. The mob tied Alice to a stake and burned the innocent girl to death a few feet from the still smoldering corpse of her father.

But Alice's spirit refused to rest. Over the succeeding centuries there have been many strange reports of ghostly presences in the botanical gardens.

A few years ago, intrigued by the tales, Mrs. Fisher went to investigate, along with students from her class in psychic phenomenon.

The students assembled at dusk and while shadows gathered over them formed a circle and joined hands as the Albany medium invoked Alice to leave her unsavory repose in the grave.

"Alice, do you hear me?", Mrs. Fisher called. "We are friends. We have come to help you, Alice, we are your friends. We will not harm you."

As the murky form became more substantial, Mrs. Fisher recognized the spectral newcomer as a slender, middle-aged man in Tudor garb.

"It was evident he was frightened, almost as if he was standing in front of an angry crowd trying to plead his innocence of something terrible he was suspected of doing," she recalled.

Only moments later, the figure of the man was joined by new shapes. What appeared as the smoky forms of men and persons in Colonial dress, angrily attacking him with sticks and stones.

Almost as fast as the man and the mob appeared, they vanished.

"It was then," the medium said, "that we began to sense Alice's presence."

The hazy, shimmering female ghost took form — then began to run frantically here and there, apparently in search of her dead lover.

"I saw her scream and then watched the poor thing fall into the brook," the psychic said.

That was enough for Mrs. Fisher and for her class. They broke the circle, the agonized wraith of Alice Van der Veer vanished, and the séance was over.

But the medium later recalled that when the somber group trooped down the hill and approached some tree stumps, she smelled a foul odor "like burning meat."

Then one of the students pointed his finger back up the hill they had just walked down, and the medium and other members of her class peered at the top.

Three tombstones which they hadn't previously noticed, were outlined against the emerald sky. But as the group began to walk back up the hill, the stones seemed to shimmer then faded away.

My America

By ED ANGER

WE'RE IDIOTS IF WE TEACH THE AFGHANS HOW TO FIGHT

"If WE'VE got to equip the Afghans (top), give 'em surplus junk from the Civil War," says Ed.

I'm madder than a drill sergeant with laryngitis over this new plan by the Defense Department to use our troops and tax money to "train" the Afghan army to be real soldiers.

We're talking basic training here, according to what I read. Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld says we're going to teach "basic soldier skills" to these raggedy cave dwellers — stuff like marching, following orders and handling weapons.

It didn't say anything about the "real" soldier skills guys like me learned during basic training — standing at attention for hours in 87 degree heat, spit shining shoes, getting sick on boiling beans, peeling potatoes, sleeping through 2 a.m.-4 a.m. guard duty, picking up cigarette butts and slipping over the lockers of the wimps who are too chicken to blast the enemy to smithereens!

Besides, haven't we already done this? We backed the Afghans against the commie Russkies and even supported a guy named Osama Bin [illegible] and get barrels [illegible] them any kind of close order drill, or how to properly strip and clean their AK 47s, or those old English muskets most of those tribal chieftains have been fooling around since the 19th century.

Let's face it, we'd be better off training the Russians to go back in and mop up. That way, we'd save ourselves some lives and trouble and then, we could step in again when both sides have killed each other off.

That ain't gonna happen, though.

I've got a basement full of army surplus crap and equipment that I'd be happy to let them have as long as they pay me in U.S. greenbacks and not sheep.

● Tell them that only pork-eating cowards — whose prostitute wives wear miniskirts, mascara, and drive cars — hide out in caves.

Real soldiers fight in the open and wear fluorescent orange vests because they're proud to be seen.

● Last of all give them "top secret" instructions like this: "Listen up troops! I am holding a super special United States military industrial complex advanced fragmentation grenade. You must remember to pull the pin and hold the grenade close to your chest for 30 seconds."

That's one bombshell way to solve the problem.

● Give them all our old military surplus hardware. Some M-1's, a bunch of those pie tin World War I helmets, some of those old Jeeps and deuce-and-a-half trucks that never started when we needed them and wound up screwing up guys like me so I got a steel plate in my head when the commies tried to overrun us at Pork Chop Hill.

● Throw in some old P-51 Mustangs, some Civil War cannons sitting around in our town parks and maybe a case of old bayonets and WEIGHT LOSS: NEW DEVELOPMENTS, FINALLY...

See what this Chinese physician - who specializes in "difficult cases" - does when a woman has trouble losing weight and...

... here's why the amazing complete weight-loss plan that she uses to help her patients lose weight is sent on a risk-free trial basis to all readers of this publication who send their name and address to the address indicated below, before May 3, 2002.

If you have trouble losing weight, or if you regain the weight lost each time, here's how you can finally lose, once and for all, 10, 20, 40 or even more than 80 pounds in record time, thanks to the revelations made below by Dr. Meixin Qu*, combined with a natural weight-loss product in caplets that you can try on a risk-free trial basis.

Exclusive:
The revelations of Dr. Meixin Qu*

GUANGZHOU (CHINA) – My name is Meixin Qu. I'm a doctor of medicine and a specialist in weight problems.

For more than 10 years, I have used a weight-loss plan in my clinic that gives results like I've never heard of elsewhere in this very day. That's why more and more of the patients who come to see me (including men and women who, after having tried everything else, consider themselves to be difficult, even desperate cases).

As you will see in an instant, this weight-loss plan is completely natural, without any risk to your health. You will lose weight quickly and never cause weak, consuming to eat everything you like and without feeling sensations of fatigue. By following my weight-loss plan, diet and exercise (to have great days or other methods), without success have lost up to 12 pounds in the first week. Then they continued to lose up to 4 to 6 pounds per week until they reached their ideal weight.

Is there any proof that anybody can lose weight?

The weight-loss plan reveals to the principles of Chinese medicine [illegible] have been proven for years.

After doing some special studies on weight loss problems, I asked myself two questions:

1) Why is it that there are people who are fat, but eat like birds? Or [illegible] dieting and can't manage to lose weight, no matter what they try?

2) Why is it that there are other people who can eat whatever they like and never gain weight?

Perhaps you've asked [illegible] questions, without being able to answer them. This problem has been of great interest to me for a long time, as perhaps it has also been yours. It is the answer to these two questions that made it possible for me to discover the weight-loss plan for helping people "who had never been able to lose weight."

Following years of in-depth research projects, tests, and hundreds of clinical observations, I arrived at the following conclusion:

[illegible] individuals who can eat anything they want, and remain [illegible] without ever getting fat, possess metabolisms that burn up all the calories they consume.

However, people who get fat despite their normal or even small diets, have metabolisms [illegible] fail to consume enough calories.

Here is an illustration of this principle: [illegible] you allocate with.

A properly functioning fireplace will burn [illegible] wood, even if it is wet. [illegible] will burn [illegible]. The combustion will have been complete. And the worse the fireplace works, the less complete the combustion and the more left-[illegible] will accumulate.

In the same way, those people who possess metabolisms that don't work well don't burn enough calories. This leaves leftover food products [illegible], which then are transformed and stored as fat.

Consequently, it is the proper functioning of the metabolism that makes people remain thin (even if they eat a lot), while conversely, poor metabolic functioning makes people get fat (even if they eat a little, as normally).

For most of us, [illegible] children, our metabolism [illegible] fairly well and we could eat as much as we wanted without ever getting fat. It is only later, usually between the ages of 20 and 30, that our metabolism begins to work less well and to burn fewer calories than we consume.

After years of study and research, I discovered that it is possible to naturally balance the process of caloric consumption by your body. This weight-loss plan enables your body to burn more calories than you consume. Consequently, there is no "low-calorie diet" to follow. There is absolutely no strenuous exercise to perform. And, of course, there is no medication at all to take.

All you have to do is to follow my weight-

BEFORE AFTER

At last, thanks to Metabolism Booster™ Weight-Loss Plan, I have lost the 45 pounds I was overweight. In only 5 weeks!

"I've been trying to lose weight for years. You have to know what it's like to look at the scales and feel ashamed to undress when I mean. I tried all the diets and tested all the weight loss plans. It cost me a small fortune. [illegible] with nothing to show for it.

Then, one day, I was told about the Metabolism Booster™ Weight-Loss Plan. It helped even the most difficult cases lose weight. So I tried the new weight loss plan.

I have lost 45 pounds scientifically in only 5 weeks. Without denying myself anything. It is marvelous to be slim. It's the beginning of a new life. My husband has been delectable with me ... he doesn't lose any occasion to take me in his arms and show me with gestures that my body pleases him!

I have gotten the old joy of life back again. One morning, I surprised myself by singing in the shower. I hadn't done that for a long time!"

Evelyn Garcia

Doctor Meixin Qu: "You may have already tried diets, exercises, medications or even other methods in order to lose weight. But I'd like to ask you: Have you ever lost as much weight as you'd hoped and did you stay slim afterwards?

If nothing has really worked for you until now, you must absolutely ask yourself two questions...

It's the answer to those two questions, revealed below, that has permitted me to help so many women – who have tried everything, without result – lose weight and keep it off. What's more, if you believe that you're a difficult or particular case, you must try the caplets that I use in my clinic to help my patients lose weight. Each full bottle of 60 caplets will last you for about one month. And if you respond before May 3, 2002, they are sent to you on a risk-free trial basis (see below)" ...

loss plan in order to naturally increase your metabolism of fat. In addition to diet, take one capful of Metabolism Booster™ before each meal. It contains 7 specific specially-formulated ingredients to trigger and accelerate your body's metabolism and elimination of fats.

Metabolism Booster™ is a unique and safe blend of natural substances to help you eliminate excess fat and boost your energy level. This unique formula offers a special blend of key protective nutrients which include vitamins, amino-chelated minerals, natural herbs and a special blend of hormone and energy boosters such as Ashwatra 2%, 5-HTP, chromium, bee pollen, Korean ginseng, magnesium and lecithin.

Metabolism Booster™ formula does not include ephedra (Ma huang) or any similar product which may result in nervousness, weakness and insomnia.

The exclusive research blend of natural substances in Metabolism Booster™ works at the cellular level to safely boost your body's metabolism furnace.

If I have succeeded in helping so many difficult cases lose weight — people who had tried everything and had never been able to lose weight — it is quite simply because I have discovered a natural, safe weight loss plan of revitalizing the proper functioning of the metabolism.

Since you lose weight the same way as people who can eat anything without ever gaining weight do, this formula always works.

There is nothing mysterious about this weight-loss plan. It simply forces your body to "burn" the fat instead of accumulating it. Approximately 24 hours after you have started to follow the weight-loss plan, your body begins to lose and evacuate the accumulated fat more quickly than anything you've ever tried before. Since the excessive calories are burned off, they won't be transformed into fat. You lose your excess pounds and inches day after day. The first week you can lose up to 2 pounds per day.

Your metabolism is activated in a way that is completely natural. Show my weight-loss plan to your doctor or pharmacist. They'll confirm it for you. With my weight-loss plan, your metabolism is working well, you feel good, full of energy — and you lose weight.

And the weight loss is totally astounding. You don't have to do any special exercises, you make no effort, and you eat normally. This is because you are losing your weight in exactly the same way as the people who eat all they want to without ever gaining weight.

MISSING MONKEY COMES HOME

JAKE spent a three-day vacation monkeying around in a neighbor's tree house

JAKE the capuchin monkey was on the lam for three days from a home where he was in training to become a helper for disabled persons. But his vacation ended when his new pals found his rightful owners.

It was a relaxing vacation for 14-year-old Jake, who spent the time hiding around a tree house and gorging on fruit and peanut butter.

Jake had disappeared from the home he'd shared for seven years with a family in Stockton, Calif. His owners, Fernando and Terri Aranda, had been training him to become a disabled aide monkey.

The day after he walked away from his family, the little imp strolled casually to Sherman Scotto's house and knocked on the front door.

"He was waving and knocking at the window to get my attention," said Scotto, who gave Jake peanut butter bananas and water.

Then Jake climbed Scotto's tree house, and spent the next two days there, feeding a neighbor, Peggy Giglio, fed peanut butter and fruit to Jake and brought him stuffed animals.

Then Scotto and Giglio saw a newspaper story about the missing monkey, which needs a daily insulin shot — and reunited him with Fernando.

"He screamed when he saw me," Fernando said.

Giglio said the experience has made her think about becoming a foster parent. Scotto just likes having a funny story to tell.

"A monkey knocking on your door," he said. "Imagine that."

Classroom horror! Boy attacked by teacher's wolf

A CLASS to teach kids not to fear wolves was interrupted when a little boy was attacked by the animal being used in the lesson!

"This is an accident that was waiting to happen," fumed Ralph Rivers, spokesman for the Animal Services Department of Riverside County, Calif. "Wolves have a wildness that can't be bred out of them."

Dora Natali had brought a wolf-dog hybrid named Dakota to a shopping center in Menifee, Calif., for his Wolf Wildlife Education program. The class teaches youngsters that wolves aren't ferocious, fearsome beasts, and can be safely approached.

Suddenly, Dakota leaped at 10-year-old Taylor Sloane and dragged the child 20 to 40 feet although Natali said it couldn't have been more than four feet since he had Dakota on a leash.

"I was screaming, 'Somebody help my son,'" said Taylor's terrified mom, Sharman Sloane, "and he was screaming, 'Mommy, help me!'"

Natali insisted Dakota was being playful and just teased some of the boy's ice cream.

Taylor was treated for puncture wounds, scrapes and bruises, and Dakota was captured and placed under quarantine. Natali may

The astounding March 11 discovery made at the Boss Waterhaus Observatory in Johannesburg, South Africa, comes just weeks after University of Arizona scientists announced their finding that a huge flood swamped the Red Planet in ancient times.

And at least one expert believes the proves that the Noah story is not fiction but actually took place on Earth!

Dr. [illegible], noted author, theologian and magazine columnist, said that the Noah deluge not only did take place on Mars, but also left behind the remains of Noah's Ark!

"The tale of Noah's Ark found in the Book of Genesis may have Intriguingly, they believe the flood came not from ordinary rainfall but a super massive devastation unlike anything scientists have ever encountered before.

"The water source is nothing like we have on Earth," according to Burr, whose amazing discovery was reported in Geological Research Letters.

"The water here gushed from volcanic-tectonic fissures. While the fissures themselves may be older, the latest eruption of the water was probably only about 10 million years ago."

According to the familiar Bible story, God became angered at mankind's wickedness and decided to wipe out everyone except the devout Noah, his family and representatives of every animal species.

He ordered Noah to build a ship meeting very particular specifications.

"You shall make a window for the Ark ... and set the door of the Ark in the side," God commanded. "You shall make it with lower, second and third decks." (Gen. 6:16)

That blueprint closely matches the newly found vessel, which appears to have three distinct decks, the South African astronomers say.

"The Bible says that the entire planet was covered with water, but there's no geological evidence that happened on Earth in the era of mankind," says the Reverend Alistair Hanley, whose Dutch Reform church is near the observatory.

"For those of us who believe in a literal interpretation of the Bible, that's always been a bit of a puzzle. Now everything is falling into place."

Dr. van der Haas says it's possible that millions of years ago before the dawn of human civilization, ancient astronauts from Mars rediscovered Earth — and brought the history of the disaster with them.

"That would explain why versions of the Great Flood story can be found on every inhabited continent, and in so many ...

Scientists believe that in the centuries after the Great Flood, the waters receded and now remain locked in ice pockets around the Red Planet.

The discovery of the Ark is only the latest pointing to intelligent life on Mars, including the famous Sphinx-like Face on Mars photographed by NASA's Viking space probe in 1976 and images of what look like ruins of pyramids.

"Given the discovery of so many man-made monuments on Mars — including canals — the sighting of a boat would not be and of itself be surprising," notes Dr. van der Haas. "But its resemblance to the Bible's Ark suggests much of human civilization, and perhaps even our species itself, originated on the Red Planet."

Meanwhile, church leaders say the discovery shouldn't rattle Bible believers.

"Whatever else," declared Rev. Hanley, "this confirms once again

AN ELDERLY moron in Britain decided to deal with his cavity problem with a toothbrush, but this cavity was below his waist — in his hemorrhoid-inflamed butt!

The 66 year old married man told doctors he "slipped" while brushing his gums and "lost" the toothbrush up his behind.

He had brushed so thoroughly that doctors couldn't find the dental device until an X-ray located it jammed in his pelvis.

Surgery was needed to extract the toothbrush, which reportedly wasn't used again either to relieve painful rectal itching or for its original purpose.

According to the British Dental Journal, this is only the second recorded case in England of someone not knowing their butt from their hemorrhoids.

But articles entitled Rectal Foreign Bodies in a 1984 issue of Surgery Magazine and Foreign Bodies in the Rectum in a 1992 issue of Short Practice of Surgery detail a painful list of bizarre objects inserted by idiots on both sides of the Atlantic who didn't know which end was up.

They include:

- A live artillery shell, also inserted by an elderly Brit suffering from hemorrhoids. "Which needed careful handling" and required a military bomb squad to construct a lead shield around his posterior in the event of an anal explosion.
- Dried concrete mix, extracted after an "enema" given by the guy man's partner.
- A variety of produce, including salami, zucchini, bananas, a condom-covered plantain, potatoes and apples.
- A frozen pig's tail, a "kangaroo tumor" spectacles, magazines, cue ball, baseball, cold cream jar and a bottle of perfume called "Impulse Body Spray."

I'm dying to join the 'mile-high club'

Dear Serena: All my life, I've dreamed about joining the "mile-high club," and I'm about to take a trip to Europe with my new girlfriend. I think this will be a great opportunity to realize this goal. How can I convince my new sweetheart to join the club with me?

Dear Serena: The last of our children has gone to college, and after 20 years of marriage, my husband and I are experiencing [illegible] being alone. I suppose we were going to talk it out and have fun, but all the pot smoke to have gone out of our lives and [illegible] Mr. husband started doing [illegible] ways to stay away from home than actually being here. Dear Serena: I recently met a man who is quite kind about his age. He's 32 and I'm 24. But since knowing him, I've become increasingly attracted to him. And there are a lot of numerical coincidences. The last four digits of my phone number are 5227. He was born in 1951 and I was born in 1977, and we were both born in May on even numbered days. His address [illegible] — is the same year his grandmother was born. He has three children and I have two brothers. Am I making significance out of coincidence or should I let them go? THIS WEEK'S SIX LUCKIEST LOTTO NUMBERS

Weekly World News has purchased exclusive rights to the world's most powerful computer — and we use it to pick the six luckiest lottery numbers every week!

The Swiss-built computer, called Bright Green, has the ability to calculate which lottery numbers are most likely to come up each week, based on previous performance and established tendencies. The numbers are good for the week Weekly World News is on the newsstand.

The computer scans all numbers selected in lotteries across America over the past year to provide a statistical base for predicting future results. More value is given to the most recently selected numbers.

Using all available data, the computer picks the luckiest numbers for each week. By children with lottery

CARJACKING CANINE STOLE MY BABY!

A ROWDY rottweiler stole a car [illegible] lot and took it on a wild five-hour joyride [illegible] 9-month-old baby in the backseat!

Frantic police in Novgorod, Russia, chased the vehicle all over the city before finally finding it driven by the woolly 13 miles out of town. The carjacking canine was nowhere to be found, but luckily, tiny Anton Sedrupov is safe and sound.

"I'm just glad my baby wasn't hurt," says much-relieved mum Alyna Sedrupova 28.

"In fact, the police told me Anton was smiling and giggling when they found him, as if he thought the whole thing was great fun."

The hot rod hound drama began around 1.30 p.m. on March 24, when Mrs. Sedrupov pulled into the parking lot of a shopping strip to drop off laundry.

"I was only running into the dry cleaners for a moment, and I thought little Anton would be all right asleep in his baby seat," she recalls.

"I forgot that I'd left my window down because I was just at a drive-thru ATM."

British tourist Darrel Sunciffe, 31, was in the park-ing lot when the passerby pulled forward to be a run away. Clambered into the car and took the wheel.

"As I turned around, I spotted that huge Rottweiler sitting in the driver's seat and I burst out laughing. He sure 'I thought someone had given him like that as a joke, so I took out my digital camera and snapped a couple of pictures.

"When the dog actually used his paws to put the car into gear and then smoothly reversed out of the parking space I couldn't believe my eyes.

"If I'd known there was a baby in the back, of course I would have tried to stop the car before it pulled out of the parking lot."

When Mrs. Sedrupov came out and saw her car missing, she panicked.

"The Englishman told me he'd seen a dog drive off with my car and at first I thought he was pulling my leg," says Mrs. Sedrupova. "Then he started going 'woof, woof' and I realized he meant it. I nearly died right away."

Good Samaritan Sunciffe flagged down a store security officer who called cops.

Police dispatchers issued an all-points bulletin for the auto and six squad cars took off in hot pursuit, but the crafty canine proved remarkably elusive.

"We figured he'd get a block or two before running into a street lamp," says police spokesman Sgt. Igor Gronsky. "Instead, we kept getting reports from all over the city from citizens who'd seen a car zip by with a dog behind the wheel."

The car reached speeds of up to 45 m.p.h. and mowed down a peddler's cart, a picket fence and a billboard advertising cat food, according to eyewitness accounts.

"It's a miracle no one was killed or injured," says Sgt. Gronsky.

When exhausted cops finally located the car on the side of a rural road, the lead-footed canine was gone, but he'd left [illegible] cat stank to high heaven," reveals Sgt. Gronsky. "And when they got Anton out of the car, he'd done No. 2 in his diaper, too."

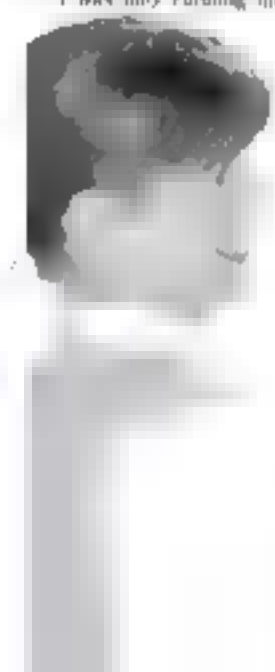
Before the hair-raising doggie-driver incident was reported on TV, authorities have received calls from another 17 witnesses who'd seen the runaway Rottweiler motorist around in various other vehicles – including a tractor-trailer — as long as three weeks earlier.

They explained that they'd kept silent out of fear cops would call them crazy.

"We believe someone once trained this dog to drive, perhaps hoping to get him on a popular Russian TV show that features crazy pet tricks," says Sgt. Gronsky.

"He's actually not a bad driver for a dog, but we do need to catch him.

"Having an animal behind the steering wheel is heavy [illegible]



"I'M JUST GLAD my baby wasn't hurt," says mum Alyna Sedrupov.

He was a rowdy pervert who had sex with goats!

THE real Robinson Crusoe was a boozing, brawling bigamist named Alexander Selkirk, who brought a new meaning to the term "animal husbandry."

Selkirk didn't have a man Friday on his desert island, like book-hero Crusoe, as he corralled a harem of wild goats, picking the prettiest to be his galpals.

And the beast bonking castaway didn't stop simply at sex, writes prize-winning British author Diana Souhami in her book Selkirk's Island, which details the seamier life of the man on whom the novel "Robinson Crusoe" was based. The Scottish seaman also got his pubes by breaking the hind legs of his nannies to prevent them from escaping and keep them near for frolics in the hay.

Then, after leaving his way with them he nurtured the bleating beasts' guts to quell his latest cravings!

And when he tired of one, the cold-hearted cad slaughtered and ate his current lover for clothing and food.

"He might have preferred it had the goats been girls," wrote Souhami. But she notes that getting it on with goats was just a handy hop, skip and hump from the ungainly between sailors that went on aboard ships in those days.

"But Selkirk was an abandoned man," she writes. "His animal lover didn't stop at goats either. For a change, the horny castaway sometimes picked a passionate-looking palm tree to rub against."

Besides being kinkier than Crusoe, Selkirk was also a bit tougher. He ran away to sea in the first place to escape an arrest warrant for fighting with his family, and gained a reputation as a hard-drinking thug, who once nearly beat a man to death with his fists.

His diets and living habits hardly improved after he was booted off his ship for fighting with the vessel's officers in 1703. They marooned the rowdy ruffian on Juan Fernandez island 360 miles off Chile, in 1703, where he remained for more than four years before being rescued.

In the novel, Crusoe found his servant Friday along with lobster, rabbits, fruits and, from the wreck of the ship, tools, tobacco, sugar, cheese, knives, forks and enough liquor to last him 28 years.

But poor Selkirk was marooned with one flask of rum that didn't last long and was surrounded by wild animals, including ferocious giant rats that he feared might eat him.

His only weapons against the flesh-eating rodents were homemade clubs, which he also used for forceful foreplay to get his goats

Man trapped in trash bin after trying to rescue favorite sweater

A MAN dived down a garbage chute to retrieve his favorite sweater — and had to be rescued when he got stuck.

Firemen pulled the 25-year-old mug out of the garbage chute of his Stockholm apartment building.

His wife had thrown out his favorite sweater, and the basement door to the trash bin was locked. So he squeezed through the 5-inch access hole on the third floor.

I'm quite small. I knew the garbage would probably be collected early in the morning, so I rushed to save the sweater."

The hard part was getting down through the narrow chute. He got stuck after sliding down one floor. He tried to climb up some knotted bed sheets that he had lowered down for him, but in the end the experts had to be called in.

They also helped him get the sweater — a hand-knit piece his mother had made.

in the mood for a little lovin'.

By the time a ship appeared to rescue him, Selkirk was happier on the island than he'd ever been. He had his picks of the litter, so to speak, and no one to nag or challenge him.

Back in civilization, the randy rover launched into raging drunken binges, picked fights and got hitched to two unfortunate gals, forgetting to divorce one before tying the knot with the other.

He finally died at sea from a tropical fever in 1721. He was survived by his [redacted] wives and his harem of captives.

— By JUSTIN MITCHELL

ALEXANDER SELKIRK, the real-life inspiration for the fictional Robinson Crusoe, was abandoned on the island of Juan Fernandez, depicted on the antique map at right.

Baby docs build womb with a view

For many women, the miracle of birth would be pregnancy without morning sickness or stretch marks. And the miracle may one day become real — scientists are working on an artificial womb to grow a baby outside its mother's body!

Researchers at Cornell University are developing the womb, made from the mother's own cells. The idea is similar to the current practice of in vitro fertilisation, in which an embryo is nurtured outside the mother's body for up to 14 days and then planted in the womb. The Cornell team hopes to extend that for beyond 14 days.

Gal locked in morgue with dead dad!

A woman spent a terrifying time locked in a hospital morgue with the corpse of her dead father!

Mary Lu, 50, went to the London hospital just after her dad died. She got trapped with the body when an absent-minded clerk locked her inside the morgue.

Horrified, Mary spent almost an hour banging at the door, pleading for someone to come let her out.

"I shouted myself hoarse and bruised my hands banging on the door," she said. "But nobody heard me.

"I was in an absolutely terrible state."

The hospital has apologised to her and is investigating.

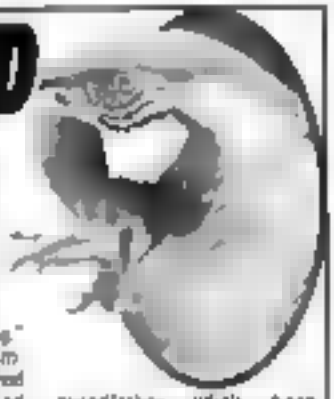
POLITICO GIVES RIVAL THE BIRD

By JASON ARNOLD/Weekly World News

— he hires parrot to run his campaign!



THE only one squawking about Jim Miller's victorious bid for mayor of a tiny mountain town is his campaign manager Jose — a full-feathered, talking parrot!

Miller picked the green and yellow bird to masterminded his election bid for the top job in Nederland, Colo. And residents knew just who to cast their ballots for after attending a rally and hearing Jose screech.

"Vote for Jim! Vote for Jim!"

It's also no coincidence that Miller's opponent — who'd be beat by a squeaky 4-point margin — is named Chris Parrot.

"It takes a parrot to know — and beat — a Parrot," Miller told Weekly World News in an exclusive interview. "He totally accounted for my margin of victory."

Like many political gurus, insiders of Jose's private campaign fairly isn't fit for print. But unlike his political peers, he literally works for peanuts.

"He's a tough nut to crack, but he loves cracking peanuts [illegible] said Miller. "Give him a peanut and he says, 'Vote for Jim.'"

Jose's advice strategy? "He is definitely opposed to a chicken in every pot," said Miller. "But he advised me to build my campaign platform on the mission "love peanuts for everyone" and it worked.

In fact, many people here think Jose would make a better mayor than any human being."

As part of his reelection campaign, Miller also offered political asylum to a deceased French couple who'd been cryogenically frozen and stored in their son in the basement of the family's chateau in the town of Neuilly-sur-Seine.

Miller's town already houses the 1st-year-old corpse of Scott Mansfield, a Nottingham grandfather who's been packed in dry ice in a garden shed since 1967.

"What's the difference between storing frozen loved ones in your basement and cremating them and putting their ashes on your mantel?" Miller said.

BIT KNOCKS 'EM DEAD

YOU SEE DEAD PEOPLE! Don't worry, so does everyone else at the Body Worlds exhibit – a killer art show put together by Germany's Professor Gunther von Hagens, left

The show of preserved and posed corpses has had showings in Japan, Austria and Germany, and is now smashing 'em dead in London

The vulturous von Hagens takes actual dead bodies and freezes them, then slices and dissects them and replaces their bodily fluids with plastic. Finally, with their bones, muscles and organs all perfectly exposed, he arranges them in eerily compelling positions

Corpses on horseback, a chess-master cadaver and a voluptuously posed mom-to-be with her unborn child clearly visible in her womb – audiences are finding it all deep-down fascinating

Von Hagens — he's the one in the feature – says he wants to give people an eyeful of the human body from the inside out.

People should become more aware of how fragile we are," he says

Not surprisingly Body Worlds has been met with plenty of controversy and criticism from people who say it's ghoulish

"Art should be about pleasure," said one woman "and looking at corpses does not give me pleasure."

But the show has sold out at most of its venues, and whether they like it or not, lots of people are packing in to see it. Von Hagens says some people are even offering to donate part of his next exhibit!

That should prove he doesn't need to rob any graves, von Hagens says. "There are no bodies without consent. I have enough."

EVEN Happy Meals couldn't cheer up distraught kids after they watched in horror as employees cornered a pet rat and beat it to death in a fast-food joint.

"There were screaming kids running everywhere," reveals a woman, who had taken her 3-year-old granddaughter to the McDonald's in Buckhannon, England.

The pet vermin was set loose in the eatery by pranksters, who reportedly wanted to ruin the restaurant's reputation.

But the outraged manager wasn't clowning around when he grabbed a broom and chased after the rodent with the help of other workers. When the critter was cornered, the manager lowered the broom.

But not everyone was happy with the lunchtime execution.

"The last thing I wanted my grandaughter to see was an animal clubbed to death," says the grieving. "I don't want to go back to McDonald's."

Party animals turn into party poopers

IF "all-nighter" started meaning bedtime at midnight when you turned 30, don't think you're the only party pooper. It turns out that most people's social life starts slumping by the time they hit their 30s.

The finding comes from a new study by the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research.

The study says that among 18-year-olds, 52 percent of men and 48 percent of women go out to party more than three times a week. By age 31 or 32, those numbers crash to 15 percent of men and 11 percent of women.

By their 35s, the study concludes,

That's just a sample of the dazzling trivia that editors and reporters at Weekly World News have unearthed while researching all the terrific stories you read in our paper every week. Here's more:

● If you like to inflict pain, you're a sadist — named after the infamous sex fiend Marquis de Sade. The person you're hurting may be a masochist, one who loves to take pain. And that word comes from 19th-century Austrian novelist Leopold von Sacher-Masoch, who wrote a steamy book about the pleasures of pain.

● The Statue of Liberty was shipped from France to New York in crates — filling 214 crates.

● Time to grow a beard? In his lifetime, the average man will spend 3,350 hours shaving. That's about 19 solid weeks of lathering up and smoothing down, start to finish.

● AT&T says about 122.5 million people call Mom on Mother's Day. The phone giant — which used to be known as Ma Bell — also reveals that 5 percent of those callers make their poor dear mothers pay for the call by dialing collect!

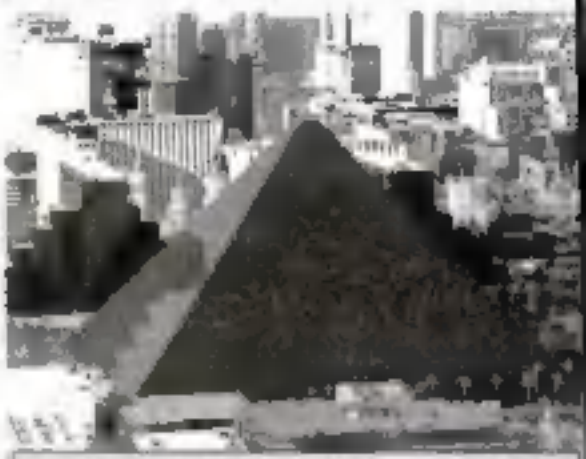
● The Salem Witch Trials, in which hundreds of innocent people were persecuted as witches in 17th-century Massachusetts, did not take place in Salem, Mass. The town of Salem Village was located in what is now Danvers, Mass. — several miles from Salem.



The Luxor Hotel (shaped like an Egyptian Pyramid) in Las Vegas is 34 stories tall, and required more than 150,000 cubic yards of concrete, 6,000 construction workers, and 18 months to build. It takes a specially designed window-washing device 84 hours to clean the sides of the pyramid, which are covered by 13 acres of glass. The Luxor atrium is the world's largest and could comfortably hold nine Boeing 747 airplanes.

● In English pubs, ale is ordered by pints and quarts. In old England, when customers got unruly, the barman would yell at them to "mind your own pints and quarts" and settle down. It's where we get the phrase, "Mind your Ps and Qs."

● More pub lore: Many years ago in England, drinkers had a whistle baked into the rim or handle of their ceramic cups. When they needed a refill, they whistled for service. "Wet your whistle" is the phrase inspired by this practice.
